If a due participation of office is a matter of right, how are them approved, and who could warrely expect from them according cooperation?

If a due participation of office is a matter of right, how are them approved. This is a painful office. But it is made my duty, and I meet it as such. I proceed in the operation with self-bention and inquiry, that it may injure the best men-least, and effect the purposes of justice and public utility with the least private distress; that it may be thrown, as rence, on ante-revolutionary adherence to our enemies.

The remonstrance laments "that a change in the Admin tration must produce a change in the subordingte officers; officers to think with their principal. But on whom does this imputation bear? On those school theirs? Or on those who have been so excluded? I lament sincerely that unessential differences of opinion should ever have been deemed sufficient to intendict half the society from the rights and the blessings of self-government, to proscribe them as unworthy of every trust. It would have been to me a circustance of great relief had I found a moderate participation of office in the hands of the majority. I would gladly have left to time and accident to raise them to their just share. But their total exclusion calls for prompter correct ions. I shall correct the procedure : but that done, return with joy to that state of things, when the only question concerning a candidate shall be, Is he honest? Is he capable Is he faithful to the constitution?"
